Cohen combats cyberterrorism/ drug trafficking

BRASILIA, Brazil — Nations must work together to combat drug trafficking, cyberterrorism and other international threats, Defense Secretary William S. Cohen recently told South American officials.

"To the extent that we can cooperate together — share information, share technology, share intelligence — we can promote the goals of protecting our people through an adequate defense," Cohen said Nov. 12 at a press conference at the U.S. embassy here.

Cohen was in South America to meet local officials and in Argentina and Chile. In Brasilia, Cohen met with President Fernando Enrique Cardoso, Foreign Minister Luiz Felipe Lampreia and the country's first civilian defense minister, Elcio Alvarez.

Cohen said Brazilian officials raised the issue of illegal drugs at each of his meetings. He stressed that drug trafficking threatens all freedom-loving people and all democratic societies and said drugs can corrupt and undermine governments and lead to organized crime, terrorism and illegal migration.

Defense chiefs from throughout the Western Hemisphere are slated to meet in Brasilia in October at the fourth Defense Ministerial of the Americas.

Asked if the attending ministers would consider creating an international police force, Cohen expressed his view that most would be reluctant.

"I believe most of the countries involved will want to cooperate on a regional basis, but that would mean also maintainingthe sovereign integrity of their own police forces, their own armed forces," he said. "And I think they would be quite hesitant to talk about an international force because of the sovereignty issues involved."

While all countries in the region are concerned about transnational drug trafficking, Cohen said each country must decide for itself how it wishes to

VQ-2 earns sixth Meritorious Unit Commendation

Lt. Terrence Dudley

In a ceremony held in the VQ-2 hangar on Thursday, 29 October 1999, VQ-2's squadron members stood tall as COMPATRECONWING ELEVEN Commodore CAPT Alex Hill proudly read the citation beginning with the words, "For meritorious service...."

The squadron received the Meritorious Unit Commendation (MUC) in recognition of the significant impact and numerous sacrifices made while participating in NATO and US military operations in the Adriatic/Balkans Theater from June to December 1998.

During this period, the squadron experienced the third highest operational tempo in forty-five years, exceeded only by activity during the Gulf War and more recently, during the conflict in Yugoslavia earlier this year.

High operational tempo equates to particularly long hours and long separations from loved ones for many in the command. With almost 200 deploying aircrew, and 70-80 supporting maintenance personnel, more than half the squadron spent at least part of those six months "on the road," or deployed, at NSA Souda Bay, Crete.

For some VQ-2 sailors, the Meritorious Unit Commendation was the first unit award in their careers, but for the Rota-based squadron, it was a significant sixth award.

This number of Meritorious Unit Commendations is exceptional even among the most combat-experienced aviation squadrons.

VQ-2 is permanently forward-deployed in the European Theater and its rapid ramp-up capability means squadron aircraft can respond to tasking — with critical maintenance support included - anywhere in theater with minimal lead time. This capability is highly prized by theater commanders and national authorities who frequently task VQ-2 to better assess theater developments.

CAPTAIN'S corner

WITH CAPT. G.K. STAIR, JR., COMNAVACT, SPAIN

One of the unexpected benefits I have is the opportunity to attend events that provide a wide variety of experiences and information. Sometimes they are with our Spanish hosts, like the Three Kings Parade; sometimes with our various tenants, such as the Marine Corps Ball, with a wonderful address by Captain Ron Black of the Hospital; and other times forums throughout the Mediterranean, like the recently completed CMC/Ombudsman Conference hosted in Rota, where I had the opportunity to listen to, among others, Radm Edward Hunter, Commander Naval Training Center, Great Lakes.

Radm Hunter used an image I am not likely to soon forget. In discussing the training philosophy and curriculum of boot camp, he compared the graduation process to a finely crafted production line, where each new recruit was like a shiny, powerful, and well tuned automobile leaving the production line, full of pride and motivation, raring to join the fleet. Having had the opportunity to attend a graduation at Great Lakes in 1984, I can recall well the pride and emotion of both the recruits and their families and friends in attendance. And I'm sure many reading this article can easily recall that day.

Radm Hunter's point, carrying the automotive analogy further, is the Sailor we receive in the fleet is that same Sailor, but because of extended training, schools, leave and other delays, he may not be as "finely tuned" as when he arrived off "the assembly line." But all it takes is a little leadership to apply a "fresh coat of wax" and a "tune-up" to make him as shiny and powerful as before.

I use the analogy because there are a few patterns I observe that remind me of a demolition derby, where the owners themselves actively diminish the luster, put a few dents on the body, and sometimes even drop the transmission. Sometimes it's done out of carelessness, sometimes out of neglect, and usually without any appreciation for the accelerated "wear and tear" it puts on one's reputation and career.

Sometimes it's simple things, like tardiness to work, which results in a loss of privileges and trust; other times it's a lack of technical proficiency and knowledge that impact advancement and opportunities for increased authority; and it may even be a pattern of misconduct that results in administrative separation from the naval service, or worse.

What I have in mind at this moment are the consequences of alcohol, which is probably one of the more difficult subjects to address because most people imbibe, and nearly everyone who does has drank to excess at least one time, if not more, in their lives. We at Rota have a very low incidence of DWI's, which sounds good, but ponder this for a moment...we have more Sailors go to the hospital with facial injuries from falling down drunk (two with BAC's over .20 in the last week alone) than receive DWI's; we have more people go to the hospital from "fist-a-cuff" injuries with BAC's over 20 than we have DWI's: and we have more people dismissed from the naval service following summary court martial for sexual related offenses (committed with high BAC's) than we have DWI's. My point is, if we focus only on DWI's we miss the fact that there are many other behavior patterns that result in even more serious consequences.

The alcohol related incidents I've seen or read about during my tour here were all avoidable...they didn't have to happen, they caused extra work for the entire chain of command, and someone usually paid the price. If you get a DWI you could be lucky; that price may only be a fine, a loss of driving privileges on base for a year, a loss of a stripe, higher insurance costs, and an inability to promote (for senior petty officers, Chiefs and officers) for many years to come.

But other incidents could also result in an OTH or a BCD (from sexual related offenses), disfigurement (from a bar fight), or even death (yes, we've had two Sailors fall from balconies, one from the barracks, and one from his apartment).

My intent is not to be an alarmist, but to reemphasize the need for personal responsibility. We will all be held accountable for our actions, so why not exercise some responsibility in advance so no one need hold us accountable. We emphasize many programs, from the designated driver, to the buddy system, Right Spirit, Prevent 2000, and alcohol free alternatives like Expeditions and other recreational programs. Use them, as well as improve on them. All we want is that shiny, finely tuned and powerful "machine" to make it safely home, and to run with pride and vigor for another day.

During his Brazil visit, the secretary said, he congratulated President Cardoso for establishing a new defense ministry and placing the military under civilian control. "The United States considers the civilian control of the military an important foundation for any democracy," Cohen said.

He and Alvarez signed an agreement to create a bilateral working group, similar to those the United States has with Argentina, Chile, Colombia and Mexico. The new group will provide a forum to discuss defense and security issues of mutual interest, Cohen said.

Under the agreement, U.S. and Brazilian defense ministers will meet annually, alternating between the two countries. The first meeting will be in the United States next year.

Cohen said U.S. Defense officials would share experience on joint services, budget planning and other programs with Brazilian counterparts in the process of creating the new defense ministry.

Cohen said he looked forward to returning to Brazil for the defense ministerial. "Brazil's willingness to host this meeting is another sign of its leading contribution to regional stability," he said. He lauded the Brazilians for participating in the Military Observer Mission Ecuador-Peru and in the U.N. peacekeeping mission in East Timor, Following his stop in Brazil, Cohen traveled to Argentina over the weekend to meet Nov. 15 with President Carlos Saul Menem, President-elect Fernando de la Rua and Defense Minister Jorge Dominguez. During his final stop Nov. 16 in Chile, the secretary is to meet with President Eduardo Frei and Defense Minister Edmund Perez Yoma.

CDR John C. Scorby, Jr., VQ-2's Commanding Officer, recognizes the sacrifice that maintaining this capability demands of his personnel and their families.

"I couldn't be prouder of the men and women of VQ-2. As a forward-deployed operational squadron, the efforts required to be continually combat ready are enormous and this latest award is a testament to their dedication. Each and every sailor played an important role in the receipt of this prestigious award.

Additionally, I would be remiss if I didn't recognize the many sacrifices made by the families of our superb sailors.

This award belongs to them as well, as they have endured many long separations so that we may maintain a constant presence on the forward edge of hostilities.

Lamindehed to them all."

Since 1970, the squadron has received the award for operations in sites the world over.

Today, as recognized by the latest Meritorious Unit Commendation, VQ-2 continues the tradition of outstanding operational readiness and impact, sharing worldwide responsibilities with sister squadron VQ-1, based at NAS Whidbey Island, Washington.

Embry Riddle assists servicemembers

JOSN Justin Takasawa get started, it's pretty easy", said

Embry Riddle Aeronautical University offers an assortment college courses to servicemembers here in Rota. Three recent graduates on different paths shared what they have learned about the school.

"I started out from scratch with Embry Riddle," said Lt. Craig Owen. "I found Embry Riddle to be the easiest to go to and get my military credits transferred to the school," he said. Owen achieved a Bachelor's degree in professional aeronautics.

"I think the biggest thing that People are afraid with Embry riddle is the math but, once you get started, it's pretty easy", said Owen.

Air force Staff Sgt. Paul Lienhard joined Embry Riddle with a somewhat different approach.

"When I started taking classes at Embry Riddle, I had already completed all of my basics." Said Lienhard.

"The schedule is very flexible," said Lienhard.

Tom Pepka chose Embry Riddle Aeronautical University because no one else in Rota offered a degree that he wanted. "Ihad already achieved 40 hours with Maryland," He said. Pepka

Parents get lesson from DGH teachers

JOSN Justin Takasawa

Marcia Spacy, Language arts and Reading specialist at DGF Elementary school has developed a new program to involve parents in their kindergartners' homework.

The program stresses the importance of families working with children to further develop the skills they pick up during school hours.

"We offer tips and suggestions also," said Spacy. "Things such as using shaving cream for writing practice," she said.

Spacy has prepared and provided parents with lesson guidelines that highlight what their children should be learning at school.

"These lesson guidelines have a whole year's worth of education," said Spacy.

Also included in the program are games and strategies to help children in areas that they may be struggling with, said Spacy. Parents can also learn the correct way to read aloud to their kindergartner.

Currently, students are learning about various books by Joy Cowley. Although the children may not be able to read, they are expected to know the basics of book construction, word placement, and pictures to get them acquainted with books, said Spacy.

Parents will now know what their children are being taught at DGF Elementary school, said Spacy.

"I thought, 'why not let the parents know what we're teaching?" she said.

Spacy held two meetings
Monday, to help parents understand the importance of their children's education and how to help them with their school work. The meetings were only two of six that Spacy has organized. So far, 84 parents have attended.

Spacy hopes to increase the program's success and spread it throughout all DODDS schools.

"So far, only one teacher in the Azores has adopted the program," she said about the panel's objectives is available on the Internet.

The panel will meet again from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Nov. 16 in the Nathan Hale Room, Wardman Tower, at the Marriott Wardman Park Hotel, 2660 Woodley Road, N.W., Washington. The meeting is open to the public, and a portion of the meeting will be set aside for public comments. Beneficiaries also can submit comments about military health care to the panel through:

The Deputy Operations Director Lt. Col. James Williamson. TRICARE Manage ment Activity Skyline 5, Suite 810 5111 Leesburg Pike Falls Church, VA 22041.

Williamson said the panel will hold at least three more meetings and also plans to visit other sites around the country before submitting its initial report to Cohen in March or April 2000.

"We want to visit military treatment facilities and talk to commanders, quality management directors and facility personnel," said Williamson, who serves as an alternate panel member. He said no specific sites have been selected, but the panel would like to visit areas where all three medical service departmentshave operations.

"That doesn't rule out visiting remote locations as well," he said. DoD's senior health official, Dr. Sue Bailey, urged beneficiaries to give the panel input either by attending its Nov. 16 meeting or mailing comments to Williamson.

"The measure of any health care system is the quality of care provided to its beneficiaries," said Bailey, assistant secretary of defense for health affairs. "We believe that the military health system provides excellent quality health care, and we continue to find ways to improve.

This new panel will assist us in our efforts to be a world-class health care system."

The panel was established under the auspices of the 1972 Federal Advisory Committee Act. The act ensures the objectivity and public accessibility of advice rendered to the executive branch by various advisory committees, task forces, boards and commissions formed over the years by Congress and the president.

DGF Home visits

As part of the implementation of full day kindergarten, DGF ES kindergarten teachers conducted home visits for the first time this year.

The teachers and paraprofessionals in each class met with parents and children in their homes

The purpose of the visits is to ease the transition for children and their parents into a formal school setting

"Response to the visits was very positive," said Jeannie Ephron. "As a parent, we could ask questions that concerned us," She said.

The road taken: a veteran tells his story

WASHINGTON—Bill Woods dropped out of high school at 17 to join the Army on Sept. 24, 1947, intending to serve three years, get out of the Army and use the GI Bill to pursue a college education. But patriotism got in the way.

As planned, Woods got out of the Army on June 20, 1950, and started his quest for a college degree. "But shortly after I got out the Korean War broke out," said Woods, who had served in Korea before the war and spoke some Korean and Japanese. "I'd already signed up for courses when I learned my old unit was one of the first committed to the war zone.

"I became heartsick about not being with them," the 69- year-old retired Army master sergeant said. "I got all upset and reenlisted in February 1951."

He was hoping to hook up with his old unit - Company A, 21st Infantry Regiment, 24th Infantry Division. Instead he was assigned to the 48th Field Artillery Battalion, 7th Infantry Division.
"I was happy not to be in the infantry," said the Cambridge, Mass., native. But, as he sees it now, he might as well have been.

That's because the morning after returning to active duty, he was issued a 42-pound radio, two extra batteries, an M-1 rifle, 120 rounds of ammunition and his rucksack. His destination: an infantry outfit on an artillery forward observation team.

Woods said he became so good at helping to direct artillery he advanced from private to sergeant in short order. But he said, "It was an awesome experience."

He survived the war unscathed, "but I got the hell scared out of me a few times with artillery shells and mortars dropping in close." He remembers being knocked to the ground by "something." "It was like a jet plane going across the back of my head," Woods recalled. "I was on the groundfor two or three minutes before finding out what it was — a Chinese recoilless rifle shell. It couldn't have missed my head by more than a foot. I don't know how it missed me. I was never so stunned in my life."

Two winters of bone-chilling Korean weather are among the worse things that happened to him during the war, Woods said. "Korea has to be one of the coldest places on Earth," he said.

Returning home in March 1952, Woods became an instructor at the radio operator's course at Fort Dix, N.J. After a few months, he was off to Korea again, but then diverted to work with the Japanese self-defense forces.

Thoughts of getting out of the Army surfaced again in 1954.

"But then, I weighed the options: I already had six years active duty. If I served 14 more years I'd have a guaranteed retirement check for the rest of my life." So he reenlisted and served a 1955-56 tour in Germany before returning to Korea for the third time in 1958 to serve with the 1st Cavalry Division. He returned to the United States in 1959, but was back with the division Demilitarized Zone between North and South Korea in 1961 — his fourth tour in Korea!

In November 1964, Woods volunteered for Vietnam and served with 114th Aviation Company (Air Assault). Four months later, he was assigned to battalion communications sergeant and transferred to the 13th Aviation Battalion.

He returned home in December 1965, but was back in Vietnam three years later. Landing during the 1968 Tet Offensive, Woods was assigned as an adviser to South Vietnamese army radiomen.

He extended in Vietnam until April 1970 "because I wanted to see this thing through until we won it," said Woods, who wears two Bronze Star Medals, an Air Medal and 10 battle stars, three from the Korean War and seven from Vietnam.

"When I left, I could go all the way to the Cambodian border without being attacked. Then everything changed."

Lady Luck was with him again. He left Vietnam without a scratch. "I took some chances and had some close calls, but Iwas never wounded," he noted. "One time a jeep behind me was blown up by a land mine in an area I'd just walked through."

Woods said he volunteered for combat so many times "because that's what I was in the service for. It bored the hell out of me to sit back in the United States giving classes, working on a set schedule and making formations. "What the hell are we in the service for if we can't get there and use what we're taught," Woods said. "It's the job and, I'd much rather get out and prove myself. Today, it would be the same thing if I had the opportunity. In fact, I was a little disappointed that they didn't call me up for the Persian Gulf War."

After retiring June 1, 1970, Woods worked as a driver and as bodyguard for the chairman of the board of a major corporation. He later bought a dry cleaning business and he ran it for nine years. After that, he was a bartender and manager of a lounge in Somerville, Mass., for five years.

"It was a 'Cheers' type of place and I really enjoyed it," Woods said. "It was the best job of my life." Problems with his right leg ended his fun bar-tending career.

Fearful of losing his leg, Woods drove to Washington to consult physicians at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. The Soldiers' and Airmen's Home nearby was the most economical lodging he could find.

"I fell in love with this place," said Woods, who became a resident in March 1993. Moving in created another fear: being retired with no job and nothing to do.

The White House came to his rescue. It sent out a cry for help to deal with mountains of mail it was receiving after President Clinton took office. Woods joined the retirement home mail detail that was bused to the White House every Thursday.

"I'm 69 now, and as long as I can still be productive I'm happy," he said. "When you're no longer as useful as you'd like to be, this is a good place to be. You can always find something to do. They treat you well and with respect."

Aiming high: Rota RC flyers take over the sky

JOSN Justin Takasawa

Every other weekend planes crash and airplane 'dog-fights' riddle the skies right here in Rota. In fact, all the action happens at the port and hardly anyone notices.

Don't worry, no one gets hurt as a result of the crashes. Welcome to the world of the Bryan McDonald, radio controlled flying

"The club was founded about four years ago," said Dave Sperber, club member.

"Bryan McDonald taught us all to fly. He recently passed on," he added.

The flying club began as just a few people who enjoyed flying radio controlled a irplanes and then, because of insurance reasons, they became an official club.

"If something was to happen, we'd be in big trouble," said John Flansberg. "We received permission from the Spanish admiral to fly down here," he said.

The club consists of nine members, said

There is a new travel agency in Puerto – Viajes Plaza Real. It's located right next to the bull ring so it's easy to find and there is easy parking. These are two big advantages.

Another advantage is that the travel agents have lots of experience with the Rota Naval community.

Viajes Plaza Real belongs to the Guiamundo Group of travel agencies and when you make your travel arrangements with them, .7% is allocated to nongovernmental humanitarian agencies that work toward making the world more just.

One of the other new ads this week is Puro Placer, an elegant and well-stocked tobacco shop located on the Paseo Marítimo in Valdelagrana. It is a luxury store with a very extensive selection of tobacco products and accessories. There is a large selection of hand rolled cigars and there are many great gift ideas.

The third new ad this week is for a furniture store in Chipiona -Muebles Artesanos Carlos Sánchez. They specialize in handmade solid mahogany furniture: tables, chairs, cabinets, bedroom sets etc. In addition to the beautiful selection they have on display, they will custom make for you. Of course, they will deliver to the local area free of charge. The store is located on the outskirts of Chipiona, on the road to Sanlúcar, near the exhibit buildings where they have the flower shows. Even if you aren't in the market for new furniture right now, it is fun to look and dream! To make things even easier, they speak English.

Remember, Taxco Mariachi, the Tex-Mex restaurant on Avenida Príncipes de España, in Rota, is celebrating its 2 ad anniversary until the end of this month. There are lots of specials including two for one sodas and half price pitchers of margaritas, Monday through Friday from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

The Casino Bahía de Cádiz has planned a magnificent dinner and cotillion for New Year's Eve this year. The dinner starts at 9 p.m. and officially ends at 2 a.m. The cotillion starts at fifteen minutes after midnight and continues until 7 a.m. There will be two orchestras: "Cuban Boys" and "Piel Canela". There will be an open bar, sandwiches, broth, sweets and party favors. Price for the dinner is 11.000 pesetas and for the cotillion it is 10.000 pesetas. If you wish to attend both, the price is 20.000 pesetas. If you would like more information, give the Casino a call at 956 871042

Speaking of magnificent dinners, Thanksgiving weekend, November 25th, 26th and 27th, the Casino will be hosting Gastronomic evenings again. This time the restaurant featured is "El Rincón de Pepe" from Murcia.

This is one of the most renowned restaurants in Spain so the dinner promises to be something really special.

Murcia is especially known for its excellent vegetables and vegetable dishes. Once, while in Murcia, I had some grilled vegetables that were out of this world.

They will be serving a "Taster's Menu" and a la carte as well. Restaurante La Terraza is open from 9 p.m. until 2 a.m.

Let's hear from you! Send your inputs to me by fax to 956-542997 or by e-mail to COASTPUB@santandersupemet.com

Story and photos by

CTR3 Robert Dudas

Yet another off-duty group assembled for an ITT sponsored trip, which met up in front of the Officer's Quarters. Tetouan, Morocco would be the sight of a shopping adventure comprised of folk from the OMBUDSMAN Conference and two NSGA personnel for $65 a person. The single sailor program also provided the exact tour for $40 on the following day. I will tell you that the sign-up sheets for the trips filled up real fast-like. Let me take you on a journey of our day in Tetouan.

After a few hours of traveling southeast with a brief, refreshment stop along the way; we arrived at the Rock of Gibraltar. During this brief ride, our chaperones, Pam and Luz, explained a little of what we should expect during our trip. Stops would include a Moroccan restaurant, a spice shop, and even a rug shop.

Pam went on to remind us that we should tip the people that would serve us as the local custom and to expect that our facilities may be the 'squat type!'

You are open to bargain for just about anything with friendly salesmen for items ranging from rugs, bracelets, T-shirts, and leather products. Pam also wanted us not to buy the knives that would be offered for the fact that customs will not allow them to be legal with our return. Expect to be hounded by the hundreds of street walking salesmen, who will corner you any way that they can to get the purchase.

Next we loaded onto a ferry for our short sail across the Strait of Gibraltar. As to be expected; our boat came with complimentary, sickness bags! On each deck, we had a dining room with the usual refreshments. The vessel was lined wall to wall with gaping windows to peer out at the water as it passed along to the shore. The most unique part about the ferry would have been the airplane style seats that were nice and soft for your trip of wading across the strait. Before we knew it, we docked at Ceuta, Morocco.

Then came another eventful ride on a bus to our destination. Once loaded on board, Pam came around with a bag for all of us to anti-up our passports, which would be left at customs until our return.

The area of Morocco that we now traversed had heritage in Arabic, Spanish, and French further away. French rule had once been. This area was also a major, summer recreation for Arabic culture, tourism and shopping. We passed numerous resort-style, Spanish-designed hotels along the way.

The landscape started out as somewhat dirt and soil to eventual green hues with occasional forestations. Mixed within the landscape were Spanish-style houses. I noticed Arabic and Spanish signs as we passed along a marina. These landscapes got greener as we closed in on our destination.

Our first acquaintances ended up being some friendly camels. One was even a baby. After a short stay with the camels, some photos, and mingling, we were on our way once again. As we continued along the way, we would gaze at sheep, more camels, storks in the mud and cows. One new sight was the accompaniment of a photographer who would follow along just snapping away with shots to be sold to whoever wanted them at the end of our trip for $2 a piece.

Pam would continue to inform us at this time. Expect to be able to get many different spices like mint for teas and dates. When we arrived at the restaurant, we sent what Pam called 'runners' to go fetch us some Moroccan coinage for a dollar per person. Once we left the safe harboring of the coast, we began to notice Muslim-style walls, which were the kind which stone mosques were built out of. This lead us to Tetouan, where we picked up our guides to lead, follow and keep our little unit together.

Thus came the town and living quarters we would travel among. These would consist of the most narrow and maze like streets and alleys that one will ever see. They wind up and down much like a miniature version of San Francisco. We passed the likes of really fine woodworking shops, which we were all impressed with. As I walked and wrote down my notes, the local youth were amazed with the lettering of our English language.

Now came the historical part of our trip.

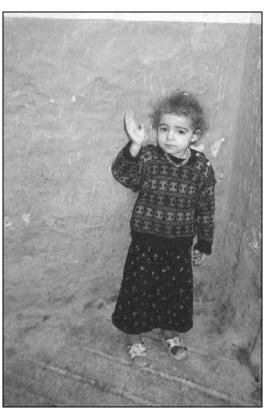

Male and female Muslims wore the same type cloaks, except that the females were more decorative. All Muslims pray five times a day at the mosque, but the women must pray in their own separate area away from the mosque itself. The architecture was 15° century masonry throughout Tetouan, but the end of the living area was marked in my mind by the works of a snake charmer. All those that took pictures with the charmer were subjecting themselves to flinching, twitching and shriveling up one's body because of the appearance and touch of the black snake. Off to the Metropolitan area we went...

Welcome to the land of flea market like roadside stands. You smelled the aroma of bread that the women brought to the bakery because their ovens do not work efficiently enough. I only remember seeing one cat until this time. All of the shoes seemed to be the same size at the venders and spices rose to your nose. I came into the area with the sound of Jennifer Lopez'' ""If You Had My Love'" blaring from a street vender radio.

The main square was covered with flags of the green, five-star Islamic on red background. We were upon the King's Palace, which was the home of the current ruler, being King Mohammed VI. Mohammed comes to stay in Tetouan once every few years to oversee the town.

During our time we stopped at a carpet shop where the salesmen were very eager and adamant about making the sale. The carpets were of many colorful, vibrant patterns. Not the everyday couch pats. Vegetable dies were used and the price ranges varied, but could be worked down. The display of these rugs were given from the low quality and through till the highest and even some reversible, colored types.

The spice shop had been very interesting in the fact that the man who represented this business gave plenty of humor in his descriptions. You could get spices for just about every ache you can think of.

I also noticed that most of the salesmen in Tetouan spoke multiple languages such as English, French, Arabic, Spanish, and even Italian for one of our members of the tour. One of the salesmen, who sold books, gave me the knowledge that the Koran states that Jesus is only the messenger or the prophet of God in the Muslim religion. Not the son of God.

On the way back from our trip, we stopped in at a pottery and ceramic roadside vender, which gave you the opportunity to get all possible kinds of fancy bowl and vase needs. The colors ranged from teh assorted bright type, to the plain-type being reminiscent of the bowl, which Jesus had been said to have chosen over those of brass, gold, etc.

All in all, I learned a lot during my time in Morocco. The history and the experience outweighed the fact that Morocco is not the most popular vacation spot.

DGF ES school supports American education week

Marcia Spacy

"Students Today Leaders Tomorrow" is The American Education Week theme this year. This theme reminds us that education is a fundamental investment for our future. Education is about possibility. It's not just a matter of giving students the tools they need to succeed in the world. It's also about helping them to fulfill their potential, to develop ideas and inventions, to imagine a better world.

Education does not occur in a vacuum. Our schools need not only financial support, but we need parents, mentors, volunteers, military leaders-everybody-to work with us. American Education Week is a great time to visit your school and see how you can contribute to making them better. It's also a good time to thank a teacher who's made a difference in your life-ory our child's.

Week activities include:

Free Book Give-Away each day of the week for students at every grade level.

Two Training Workshops for kindergarten parents on Monday.

Smokeout!

HM2 Cornelius-Scott

American Smokeout. This is the day millions of Americans will throw away their tobacco products to become tobaccofree and promote a healthier life-style.

Many people are now well informed about the additives that are placed in tobacco products. Some additives may be the leading cause of lung cancer, heart disease, stroke, chronic bronchitis and emphysema.

According to the Health Enrollment assessment Review Surveys conducted by the Naval Hospital Tricare office, a total of 241 people have tried to quit smoking in the past year and 194 people surveyed stated they had seriously intended to quit smoking in the next six months.

At 11 a.m. Thursday, the Health Promotions department, Hospital galley and Booster Club will be sponsoring an Adopta-Smoker luncheon for those hospital personnel who decide to remain smoke smoke-free for 24 hours. "Cold turkey" sandwiches, salad and fruit will be served.

A 5K run will be held Thursday at the Fitness Center for those who want to "Kick the Butt" out of cigarettes. Sweatshirts will be awarded to the first 30 couples (one of the two must be a smoker). Activities will include free blood pressure screenings, goodie bags with literature and a sign up sheet for the next tobacco cessation class. Come out and show your support!

with Chaplain Larry Lott

A man decided to walk the last few miles to his spiritual retreat at an Egyptian monastery.

He stepped-off the bus in a small village and confidently set-off across the desert. A few hours later he realized he was lost. Instead of arriving at the monastery selfassured and proud he eventually found his way there humbled and grateful to be alive.

He later said, "I gradually came to understand one of the most important things the desert had to teach me: to enter the desert is to relinquish the illusion of control. Being in charge of our own destiny is a fantasy we cling to.

But when God takes us through a desert experience we learn that our only hope rests

Marriage Enrichment Workshop

If its not broken, don't fix it. Right? That approach might work with machines, but when it comes to people and relationships there is always room for improvement. The Chapel and Family Services are teaming-up to help you fine-tune your marriage (or prepare to tie the knot). The Marriage Enrichment workshop will be held 30 Nov and 01 Dec at the Chapel and will be led by Chaplain Steve Beyer and Mrs. Beth Havens.

"This isn't counseling", says Beyer. "Its training. We give couples the tools, show them how to use them and even offer some roadside assistance, when needed.

Wives like the workshop because we focus on matters of the heart. Husbands like it because we give them tools and an owner's manual. Its not very complicated and its not touchy-feely.'

Some of the topics in the two-day workshop

Warning Signs Communication Skills Expressing Criticism Constructively Keeping Fun, Friendship & Romance Alive Problem-Solving

CommitmentandForgiveness Spiritual Foundations for Marriage

If you would like to attend the workshop or need more information, please contact Mrs. Beth Havens at ext 3232 or Chaplain Beyer at ext 2161 (beyers@navsta.rota.navy.mil).

Active duty personnel who plan to attend should submit a Special Request chit to their chain-of-command IOT attend this training. The class will run from 8:15-4:15 both days.

Donations to Local Spanish Charities

The holiday season is fast approaching. In an attempt to spread good will and cheer, many private organizations will be actively seeking donations to their favorite charities in the local Spanish community.

Donating to charities in Spain has been an ongoing frustration for everyone involved. It would seem that the generous act of contributing unwanted personal effects and household goods to needy individuals would be a simple and welcomed

However, under the Agreement on Defense Cooperation between the United States of America and the Kingdom of Spain, any off-base transfer of items that were brought into Spain tax-free is prohibited. Transfers are only permitted between TEI card-holders

This year, as well as in the past, official requests have been made to the Office of Defense Cooperation, Madrid, in an attempt to change this policy. Last month the Spanish Permanent Committee in Madrid again denied this request.

It is unfortunate that well-intended humanitarian efforts have encountered another roadblock. Remember that you can still donate your time and talents, just not your tax-free treasures.

Wednesday

6 p.m. Blue Streak (PG-13) 8:30 p.m. Mystery Alaska (R)

Dudley Do-Right (PG – for mild comic action violence and for some brief language and innuendo) Comedy; Brendan Fraser, Sarah Jessica Parker (82 mins.)

A dedicated but hapless young

— MOVIES

Mountie discovers that the villainous Snidely Whiplash is planning to swindle all the local citizens out of their land with a fake gold rush scheme. It's up to Dudley to single-handedly expose Snidely's dastardly plot.

Blue Streak (PG-13 – for action violence, continuous language and some crude humor)
Comedy; Martin Lawrence, Luke Wilson, David Chappelle (93 mins)

When a talented jewel thief is involved in a heist that goes bad, he is forced to hide the precious diamonds at a construction site. Three years later, he returns to pick up his loot only to find it is now a police precinct. He works as a detective, winning the admiration of his "fellow cops" as he tries desperately to recover his stolen diamond.

Drive Me Crazy (PG-13 - for teen alcohol and drug use, and for language)

Romantic Comedy; Melissa Joan Hart, Adrian Grenier, Britney Spears (90 mins.)

Spears (90 mins.)
Two teens, prior opposites, who live next door to each other, never make a love connection, until they gather with friends and neighbors.

Mumford (R – for sex-related images, language and drug content)

Comedy; Loren Dean, Hope Davis, Jane Adams (111 mins) The story of a psychologist who hangs out his shingle in a small town and begins dispensing nononsense advice to an array of quirky locals. His unique style of therapy has a surprising effect on the community.

Stigmata (R - for intense violent sequences, language and some sexuality)

Thriller; Patricia Arquette, Gabriel Byrne, Jonathan Pryce, Nia Long (102 mins)

A Boston girl in her twenties is plagued with unexplainable happenings. When, at the darkest moment of one of her episodes, a chance encounter with a local priest is caught on tape. The spiritual implications of the incident drive the Vatican to send their own investigator.

Mystery Alaska (R – for language and sexuality) Comedy; Russell Crowe, Burt Reynolds, Hank Azaria (119 mins)

The remote town of Mystery, Alaska stands on the brink of greatness. It may look cold and unexciting from the outside, but inside, behind closed doors, it has all the scandals, hidden secrets, prying eyes and political hypocrisies of any urban backwater, plus! It has a darn good hockey team.

SPORTS

Admiral center makes all conference at season's end

Kvle Robbins

All Conference Center and Linebacker Joe Johnston shares the story of his path to glory. Since the age of seven, Joe Johnston dreamed to play contact football like his two older brothers in Oak Harbor, WA, but little did Johnston know that he would one day play for Rota's Fightin Admirals.

From the start of his youth football career, Joe Johnston started as a Center and Defensive Lineman. And as the years progressed, the love for the sport and center position grew.

"I've always enjoyed playing Center because it's actually one of the most important positions. Though it's not a glory position like the Quarterback or the Fullback, I'm satisfied to know that my running backs and quarterback realize and appreciate my importance, and that it was I who started the play and helped make the hole that lead to atouchdown."

But at the beginning of the '99 season, a new and just as strong love for a position set in.

"I won't deny that to be able to knock down the toughest player of our opponents defense is a great thrill. But to be the Middle Linebacker, and go head on with the flashy running backs and drive their body into the ground is an experience that can not be described in words."

Even though the game of football is an aggressive sport, Joe Johnston plays for the qualities that are rarely seen.

"True, it is at times a violent sport, but that's what people like to see and watch. And though I do enjoy the part of being able to physically beat up on an opponent; I enjoy the way the sport teaches discipline and teamwork more. Two qualities that will and are useful in the working world."

Now with the season over, Joe Johnston turns his attentions to universities. But Johnston will never forget his experiences with Team Rota. From the fight song "Never Give Up" to the cries of victory. The long hours of traveling and the sleeping on gym floors, the Quarterbacks he's protected and his key blocks for the 30 Dive Bear. Bone crushing hits and missed snaps in the Single Wing. All will be in his memory as he progresses in life.

A sweet memory of being a champion, and a member of the All Conference team, and that is a memory that no one can take away from him. And who knows, maybe one day Joe Johnston will start coaching himself, and spread the tradition of "Never Giving Up" that was planted in him by Team Rota

sports talk

with Russ Gambrel

Well, it wasn't such a great week for Ricky Williams. On Saturday, Ron Dayne passed Williams to become the all-time NCAA rushing leader.

Ricky's reign as the king of college football running backs lasted a little less than one calendar year.

The following day, Williams was stopped one yard short of his third 100-yard game as a professional. Forget about the total yardage though. The guy carried the ball thirty times. That averages out to a hair over 3 yards per carry. That kind of average just won't cut it in the big leagues.

Two weeks ago, Ditka put the ball in his star rookie's hands forty times. In that game, Williams rushed for 179 yards and averaged less than 4.5 yards per carry. Ditka's strategy has now become painfully obvious. He's hoping that everybody notices the yardage totals and ignores the per-carry average. He leveraged the entire future of the Saints franchise on one guy and that wager is not paying off. Now, in an attempt to salvage his diminishing legend, Iron Mike is running Ricky straight into an early grave. Kinda sad. Let's roll...

Do yourself a favor and pick up Sports Illustrated's 1999/2000 NBA preview.

There are free copies lying all over the base. When you find one, go straight to the story on Phil Jackson and his new home in Lakerland, It's quite an eve-opener. Instead of the usual crap-tacular coaching bio SI's interview with Jackson contains some very candid talk about Shaquille O'Neal and the Lakers' dynasty. Jordan's former mentor is obviously not a fan of LA's "showtime" mentality. He's also surprisingly frank about Shaq's ability to carry the Lakers. When asked who would assume floor leadership on his team, Jackson cuts loose with this little nugget:

"Yes, Shaquille would be the obvious choice, but because of his free throw situation, he can't be the leader ... you've got $to\,deliver\,in\,the$ clutch if you are going to be the leader, and if you can't make free throws...'

Ex-squeeze me? LA's front office unloaded $125 million on Shaq under the $impression\, that\, they\, were\, getting\, a\, chief.$ Now they are paying Jackson $6 million a year to tell them that what they actually got was just another indian. Fast forward to opening week and make note of O'Neal's two ejections in three games. I guess $125 million just doesn't buy you any leadership

I bring all of this up to debunk the widely held belief that Los Angeles is finally going to win another championship. Mark my words. Any team built around Shaquille O'Neal will never win a title. The guy is just too selfish.

His entire agenda since he joined the league has been to belittle as many opponents as possible. Remember that little dance he did after the Magic secured their first trip to the Finals? A guy with his size and talent should have fingers-full of rings. Instead, he runs around the floor every night gobbling up points and providing zero inspiration.

If you want to put your hard-earned money on a real thoroughbred, take the Spurs. History alone makes their case. If memory serves, since 1980, only one team has failed to repeat. 'Nuff said. See ya next week...
